A row of five bronze busts is displayed on dark, rectangular pedestals. The busts are arranged in a line, showing profiles of various individuals. The busts are made of a dark, possibly patinated, metal. The pedestals are dark and have small white labels attached to them. The background is a plain white wall with a doorway visible on the left.

Small white labels with text are attached to the pedestals. The text on the labels is partially legible and includes names and dates. The labels are positioned at the base of the pedestals, providing information about the busts displayed above them.
